First appearing with Road Runner in "Fast and Furry-ous" by Chuck Jones, Wile E. Coyote had to wait until 1952 before the famous duo again hit the screen in their second animated short film, "Beep Beep". Since that time, Wile E. Coyote has co-starred in more than 40 Road Runner films and, in a series of cartoons with Bugs Bunny, Wile E. pursues the inimitable rabbit and even speaks.

Wile E. Coyote is the great American anti-hero, the guy with a dream, overwhelming confidence and obsessive ambition who nevertheless always manages to lose. A brilliant inventor as well as the biggest customer for Acme products, Wile E. Coyote's unshakable conviction in his superior intellect leaves him wide open to the free-wheeling instinctive reactions of the Road Runner.

Wile E. Coyote's single-minded strength of purpose and high physical energy is admirable but his sneaky and devious behavior doom him to be the fall guy to Road Runner's speed. He's a strong secondary character and for maximum potential should always be teamed with Road Runner. Boys ages 3 to 7 really relate to the slapstick humor and quirky inventions of Wile E. Coyote.
